

Draw Your Tu B'Av Lovelines

We can't guarantee your beloved won't be confused when you suggest celebrating Tu B'Av this August instead of that more widely-celebrated day of love, but hear us out. Forget the chocolates and fancy gifts. Back in the Second Temple period, Tu B'Av was celebrated by putting on white garments and frolicking in the field to find a partner. You can also take an evening stroll with the ones you love since Tu B'Av falls on a full moon.

Use the space below to draw a diagram of all the people you love. Then, branch out to the people they love. How much love can you send out to the world this summer?
