The Beginning

By Rachel Kann

If you can find stillness, the jasmine will night-bloom in your direction and the breeze
will carry its sacred exhalation of perfume toward you.

Breathe,
the moon will cascade waves of radiance
downward,
drop her silver robes,
glow.

You will awaken,
overtaken by a love
that asks no permission,

golden particles rising
beneath your skin.

all of existence
longs to be an offering.
eternity is a constant whisper wishing to be listened to.

This is the beginning.
This is only the beginning.
Let it in.
